WEST LIBERTY, MORGAN COUNTY, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, JULY 8, 1937

WHOLE NUMBER 1395

AMENDMENTS TO BE VOTED ON

Frankfort, Ky.—Altho most voters of the state may not be aware of it because of interest in other contests, the Kentucky electorate will pass on two proposed amendments to the state constitution at the November election.

Both proposed amendments were submitted by the 1936 general assembly in regular session.

One of them would materially alter section 256 of the present constitution, relating to the mode of revising the constitution. Under the existing charter, not more than two amendments may be submitted to the electorate at one election, and then only at a regular election for selection of members of the legislature. If rejected, an amendment may not be re-submitted for at least five years.

The proposed change would permit the legislature by a vote of at least three fifths of its membership to submit as many amendments at one time as it saw fit.

The present restriction on limiting each proposed amendment to one subject would be retained, but the requirement that amendments be submitted only at regular elections would be removed, thereby enabling the legislature to order a special election for a decision on a proposed amendment at any time except within 90 days after final passage of the amendment proposal by the legislature.

Should the proposed amendment be adopted by the electorate in November, the 1938 general assembly could, if it wished, submit a dozen or more amendment proposals and call a special election next year for a decision on them. Should it be rejected, it could not, under the present constitution, be submitted again for at least five years.

The second proposed amendment to be voted on in November would permit the legislature, by uniform laws, of application of either state-wide or according to a classification based on population, to reorganize city and county governments into single county wide governmental units or into a single county wide group of interrelated and interdependent units.

The purpose of this amendment is to enable counties containing large cities, such as Jefferson county, to merge some of the now overlapping functions of city and county.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

On Saturday afternoon, June 26, Mrs. Herbert Fannin entertained with a lawn party in honor of the third birthday of her little son Farrel.

The lawn was bright with pretty flowers and the large trees made it a very inviting place. Many games were played and the little folk entered into the spirit of the evening with much enthusiasm.

Farrel is a student of the nursery school in which Mrs. Fannin teaches, and of course the nursery school had a special invitation. The following children were present from the nursery school: Anita Reed, Darrel Hamilton, Lowell and Jean Carter, Mary Louise Elam, Melva Wingo, Jackie Black, Joyce K. Howard, Denzil Elliott, Dickie Black, Junior Davis, Josephine Turner, Garry Lee Elam, Ernest and Roy Pennington, Billy Roy Howard, Helen Fay Sebastian, Pauline Blair, Harold Gardner Elam, Sonny Adkins, and Gwendolyn and Ruth Franklin.

Other distinguished guests were Henry Lowell Allen, Richard Lane Craft, Jean Davis Reese, Jimmy and Jenalee Moore, Jimmy Dale Howard, Garry Carter, Charles Black, Roberta Williams, Donald B. McKenzie, Vesta Wilson, and George Franklin Fannin, brother of the host.

Mrs. Fannin was assisted in entertaining this interesting little group by Miss Gillian Henry, Miss Icie Davis, Miss Zella Hopkins, and Mesdames Mattie Davis, Clarice Reese, Miss Allen, Curtis Elliott, Mae Craft, Elizabeth Elam, Clara Carter, Lena Turner, Aileen Long, and Roy Elam.

Mrs. G. I. Fannin, grandmother of Farrel, of course was present and added joy to the affair by presenting each little guest with a Dixie cup just as Farrel blew out the candles on his birthday cake. Lemonade was also served throughout the evening, and the little folks enjoyed the occasion immensely.

Special School Closed

The special term of school conducted here by W. L. Carpenter, Bill McGuire, and Wendell Nickell closed last Saturday. The school was conducted for the benefit of those who wished to earn credits for college work.

Why?

If we're such fine people, why is it all the better things have to beg and whimper to make a living, while all sin has to do is hang out its sign and patronage comes running?

Kentucky's Fiscal Situation

Governor Chandler said in his Governor's day address at LaGrange that when he assumed office the state debt was $26,000,000, and that now it was $12,600,000. His administration is 18 months old, and has thirty months to run. It is a demonstrable fact, therefore, that the debt will be entirely wiped out during the present administration. And this is in spite of the fact that Kentucky is spending a considerable sum each year for old age pensions, and will spend another considerable sum upon its penal and eleemosynary institutions.

Individuals who have labored under a debt know that the rate of payment accelerates as the debt is discharged because every dollar that is paid on it relieves that much interest burden. The interest, at the then prevailing rate of five percent, on a $26,000,000 debt was over a million and a quarter dollars a year. The interest on a $12,000,000 debt at the present three percent rate is only $360,000 a year, a saving of nearly a million dollars a year in interest at the present time, compared with the fall of 1935.

Gov. Chandler has been aided by the general prosperity of the people, compared with their adversity during the preceding administration, and by new taxes, which have netted the state treasury many more dollars than those who framed the tax bills calculated.

But the willingness with which the people have borne the greater tax burden has, in the News' opinion, been due to the fact that they thought something was being accomplished with their money. A man is not very enthusiastic about saving $100 a month if members of his family squander $200 a month, and leave him a little more in the hole every thirty days. But if they cooperate with him, in thrift and providence, he enjoys saving because he feels that he is getting somewhere thru his efforts.

That is the reason the people were restive under their tax burdens of former administrations. No matter how much money was dumped into the till at Frankfort, every state treasurer's statement showed the state owed more than when the last statement was made. It was not very encouraging to the taxpayer. Now the result is quite the opposite. When State Treasurer Buckingham gets his name in the papers it is to call interest bearing warrants for payment, and the people know there is no new debt taking its place, because not a single interest bearing warrant has been issued during the Chandler administration. The first thing the governor did when he moved to Frankfort was to decree that the state was to live within its income. That was a necessary precedent to reducing the debt.

At LaGrange, the governor promised the only remaining step to make his fiscal program 100 percent perfect. That is to abolish and reduce taxes when, as, and if they are rendered unnecessary to the state's revenues. The general rule with taxing authorities is that when a tax is once levied and collected they are reluctant to give it up. Even tho the emergency for which it was levied has passed, they always manage to find new avenues of expenditure as a pretext for its retention. That, Governor Chandler says, will not be the policy of his administration.

He promised to repeal the general sales tax and he did it. He promised to repeal the luxury taxes, passed during his administration, and he did it. He is now committed to the general policy of reducing and repealing other new taxes when the emergency created by the state debt he inherited has been eliminated thru its discharge. He should do that; and the News believes he will.

It would not be fair to the taxpayers to make them continue to bear the present burden after the debt is paid, but it will be a happy day when Kentucky joins Nebraska, Maryland, and other thrifty states, which owe nothing and have money in their treasuries.—Elizabethtown News.

Rev. Dallas Beuchimer and M. C. Bradley, of Dingus, were guests at the home of J. M. Gevedon one night last week.

Jean Gevedon was a week end guest of Blanch Oldfield of Mize.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Abbott and son Walter and Mrs. Corinne Gevedon and daughter Betty Jo, who had been visiting relatives in Ohio and Indiana, returned home last week. Mrs. Lula Gevedon went with them and is spending the summer there.

Mrs. J. D. Lykins was taken seriously ill Tuesday evening. The doctor prescribed ten days in bed.

Mrs. Wheeler Stricken

Mrs. Wheeler of Grassy came in Saturday to spend the day with her son, Jesse Adams, and family. She had just arrived and her granddaughter was giving her a drink, when she dropped the dipper. Christine and Mrs. Wheeler's step-granddaughter caught hold of her and with some difficulty got her to the bed. They called Mrs. Murphy and rushed for Mr. and Mrs. Adams and Dr. Sparks. It was thought that the stroke, which completely paralyzed the right side, would take her at a moment's notice, so weak was her heart. Monday she was much worse, but breathed easier thru the night. She seemed to hold her own until yesterday morning, when the watchers noticed she could move her right leg a little. It is hoped she may get able to speak. Her husband and her son Leonard, of Caney, have stayed by the bedside with Mr. and Mrs. Adams. Other relatives came to see her.

DRIVERS' LICENSES DUE

Frankfort, Ky., July 6.—It was announced today by James W. Martin, commissioner of revenue, that motor vehicle operators would be able to secure licenses at all circuit court clerks' offices beginning tomorrow, July 7. The license costs $1 and must be secured before August 1, he said.

Martin emphasized the fact that securing the licenses before August 1 does not relieve automobile drivers of the necessity of carrying their present licenses until August 1. He urged however, that licenses be secured early in order to avoid the last minute rush.

Lee McClain, adjutant general, said that he expects to cooperate with the department of revenue in enforcing the operators' license requirement by extensive road control early in August.

VISITED AT CINCINNATI

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Peyton and son Larue, of this place, visited their friends, Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Ellington, at 2465 Warsaw avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio, on Sunday, July 4. New York Fair Hall to Feature Radio and Television

NEW YORK (Special)—Radio, television, movies, telephone, telegraph, photography, news and magazine print—all those factors as they relate to communications in American life—will have their own pavilion and ten-acre exhibit zone at the New York World's Fair of 1939, according to an announcement by Grover Whalen, President of the Fair Corporation.

The Hall of Communications will be built this year on the 1216½-acre exposition site within a few minutes ride from mid-town Manhattan. Its location is adjacent to that of the unique Theme Centre structures, which with their "thousand wonders" will dominate the Fair grounds. About the Hall will be grouped ten acres of buildings to be erected by private exhibitors in the communications industry, said Mr. Whalen.

Before the building will be two ultra-marine pylons, 160 feet high and faced with continuous glass lighting fixtures. Features of the structure are a great hall, in which will be placed the focal exhibit summing up the role of communications in the World of Tomorrow, and a glass-walled restaurant opening onto a dining terrace and garden. The total length of the Hall of Communications will be over 400 feet. Its cost is estimated at $400,000. Numerous other Fair structures are emerging from stages of design. Construction of the exposition, however, will not reach its peak until early next year.

IN MEMORY OF

MRS. SIMON STACY

It was in the month of June, When mother earth was untold, That God remembered, And called home a soul. He called a mother old and fair, Whose life was rich as gold. Before they were willing to give her up, God called a soul. A sad home was left, A dear old husband too, A bunch of lonely children, Since they had done all they could do, The vacant spot can never be filled, As the leaves of fate unfold, For the dear mother had lived her appointed time, And then God called her soul. We loved you more than tongue can tell, Our love will never grow old, Since God has called your soul. We hope to meet you in the by and by, We thank each and every one who was so kind and stood by us during her sickness. MRS. J. G. STACY

Misses Elizabeth Wells and Carrie Adams, of Middletown, Ohio, spent the week end here with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Wells and Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Adams. The girls are certainly missed by their large circle of friends here and especially in the church and Sunday school work. Altho they enjoy the large Sunday school where they are, they seemed glad to be back in their own little church, and attended every service while here in spite of their busy time at home.

Mrs. Paul Henson, who was at a hospital in Lexington with Mrs. W. H. Manker, returned the last of the week. Mrs. W. P. Elam brought her mother, Mrs. Manker, home Monday. It was found that it was the neck of the femur bone broken. Mrs. Manker is free from pain. She must lie in this cast for twelve weeks, as it was her side afflicted by paralysis that was injured by the fall. She is quite cheerful since she is in her own home with her husband.

Mr. and Mrs. Dukes Gentry and family, Howard, Winalee, and Harriet, of Jackson, Michigan, visited a few days with Mrs. Gentry's mother, Mrs. R. A. Baldwin, returning Tuesday. Her son, Russell Baldwin, who attends school in Michigan, was with the Gentrys for a short visit before his trip south.

Mrs. Addie McClain of Elkfork stopped Monday night with her son Ollie, on Court street, on her return from Illinois, where she visited her daughter, Mrs. Coldiron. She also stopped in Winchester for a visit with another daughter, Mrs. Joe Reed.

Prichard Caskey of Lexington was home Saturday and Sunday with his parents, Judge and Mrs. W. A. Caskey. His cousin, Miss Isabelle Elam, was with him for a week end visit. Her sister, Miss Carolyn Elam, returned home with them.

Mrs. Lou Cox, who had been confined to her bed, is so much better she goes to the table to eat. She is anticipating a visit soon at Pomp with her sons.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodford Howard and two sons, of Prestonsburg, spent the week end at White Oak with Mr. Howard's brother, Bernard, and parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harris Howard.

C.I.O. STEEL POWER FADES

Thousands Back at Jobs as Companies Maintain Stand ... Congress Digs In ... Hitler Warns He'll Act Alone

Steel Furnaces Glow Again

PLANTS of the independent steel corporations in Pennsylvania and Ohio were once more operating as state troopers kept the peace. Violence among strikers, workers and police dwindled to a handful of hand to hand fights in which injuries were comparatively few.

With Gov. George H. Earle having lifted martial law in Johnstown, Pa., it was estimated that nearly half the 5,000 workers of the Bethlehem Steel corporation's great Cambria plant were back on the job.

It was apparent that the real grip of the strike had been broken. Mayor Daniel Shields declared it was all over, but there were still about 250 pickets on hand. The day before the plant re-opened the C. I. O., in a last-minute attempt to save its cause, promised a mass meeting near Johnstown of 50,000 miners who would then aid the steel strikers in keeping the plants closed.

Only about 1,500 showed up, and after listening to speeches by union leaders they dispersed peacefully. Plants of the Republic Steel corporation and Youngstown Sheet & Tube company in Ohio's Mahoning valley, where half of the total numbers of state militiamen were protecting the public peace, again were operating. Steel plants in Chicago were preparing to reopen. Still none of the independent steel corporations had signed contracts with C. I. O. unions. Their refusal to sign had been the sole issue of the strikes.

Der Fuehrer Scores Neutrals

"FROM now on," Adolf Hitler told 200,000 Nazis at a party rally in Wurzburg, "we will prefer to take the freedom, independence, honor and security of our own hands and protect ourselves alone."

Adolf Hitler

Disgusted, Germany withdrew from the non-intervention patrol of Spain, as Italy did likewise. Der Fuehrer warned that the Nazis would take independent action to protect themselves from attacks by the Spanish government. He described how Germany had been condemned for shelling Almeria after a Spanish airplane had bombed the cruiser Deutschland, and how, when the cruiser Leipzig was attacked by a submarine while on patrol duty, the non-intervention committee had done nothing about it.

A remedy suggested by Great Britain and France was that the patrol duty be left entirely to them, with Italian observers on French patrol ships and German observers on British ships to "judge the equitable impartial working of the system."

Looks Like a Long Summer

CONGRESS will be in session for a long time yet, probably until September 1. That was the consensus of the 240 senators and congressmen who attended President Roosevelt's week-end outing for majority members on Jefferson island in Chesapeake bay.

Although they insisted the meeting was purely social, it was generally accepted that attempts had been made to swing back certain of the New Deal lawmakers who had been getting out of line lately. The result is that a heavy program of legislation desired by the administration will be attempted before the members of congress can leave for home.

The President's court bill—presumably in its original form, although it seems to face certain defeat, either through a vote or through filibustering—headed the list. It was closely followed by government reorganization and wage and hour measures.

Seeks Changes in Wagner Act SEN. ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG of Michigan proposed three amendments to the national labor relations act designed to broaden the rights of employers under the Wagner act, forbid "sit-down strikes and other unfair" union practices, and provide severe penalties for unions which violated contracts with employers. His amendments:

1.—To give employers the same right which only employees now enjoy to appeal to the national labor relations board for an election to determine the representatives of employees.

2.—To require agreements in writing and to permit strikes only after a majority vote of all employees. Any group which broke its contract and did not repair the break after being ordered to do so by the board would be suspended from representation.

3.—Establish a code of practices for labor. This would: Prohibit compulsory political assessments on union members. Require that all union officers, agents and representatives be United States citizens.

Prohibit union organization by coercion. Prohibit damage to property, strikes intended to force any person to violate a contract or federal laws, and violations of "any person's rights in real or personal property."

Montagues and Capulets WITH all the family blessings save those of a political classification, Miss Ethel du Pont, daughter of Eugene du Pont, and Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Jr., son of the President of the United States, were married at Christ church near Wilmington, Del., in a "simple" wedding attended by a "handful" of about 400 picked guests. Bitter political hatreds of the older generations were buried in the protests that this was "the youngsters' day."

Gedson Slayer Surrenders ROBERT IRWIN, New York sculptor, who once treated for insanity, was killed by a bullet fired by a woman, Mrs. Mary Gedson, his mother and Frank Byrnes, a boarder in the Gedson home, on last Easter Sunday, surrendered to police in Chicago. He was flown back to New York City where indictments were being prepared. He prepared to defend himself from the electric chair by a plea of insanity.

Budget Trouble, French

BUDGET trouble is bothering France in a serious way; in fact, the resignation of Premier Leon Blum and his People's Front government, to be succeeded by Camille Chautemps. One of Chautemps' first acts was to appoint Georges Bonnet, ambassador to the United States, as minister of finance, with orders to begin attempts to balance the budget.

Bonnet's first moves were to close the stock exchange and suspend foreign exchange and commercial payments pending a decision on whether or not he would be made an economic dictator temporarily.

France, like the United States, operates on two budgets—ordinary and extraordinary. France's deficit in her ordinary budget, as estimated by retiring Finance Minister Vincent Auriol, is about $200,000,000, and the extraordinary budget, approximately $1,000,000,000. Rene Brunet, Bonnet's under-secretary, said they could be balanced in three years.

Most of the expenditures from the extraordinary budget are for defense.

Budget Trouble, U. S.

TREASURY figures indicated that the end of the fiscal year would find the President's economy program missing its mark by about $200,000,000. Last April he warned all departments that expenditures would have to be drastically cut, and revised his budget to $295,000,000 less than the forecast in January. His revised budget estimated that expenditures from July 1, 1936, to June 30, 1937, would be $7,731,000,000; actually they turned out to be $7,883,000,000, or $102,000,000 above the estimate. It was believed that, at that rate, there would be a difference of about $200,000,000 in the budget and actual spending for the entire fiscal year.

"Humanizing" the Majority

A MAJORITY members of congress met on Jefferson island in Chesapeake bay with President Roosevelt, to have their relations with the chief executive "humanized." The belief in Washington circles is that the President is willing to accept a third term expanded to the greatest proportions yet known.

The spark which touched off the latest cloakroom whisperings of a third term was the declaration by Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania that he would give "unqualified and final" support to a Roosevelt-for-President movement in 1940. Further reports had it that John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization and leader of the sit-down strikes that have swept the nation, was working toward the same end. The President has only indirectly disavowed such an ambition.

The Mail Must Go Through

FEDERAL warrants were issued at Cleveland for six C. I. O. leaders in the strike at Youngstown and Warren, charging them with preventing delivery of the United States mails to loyal employees of the steel company plants there. Their names were not revealed.

The order for the obtaining of the warrant was given by Attorney-General Homer S. Cummings after he had looked over testimony at the senate post office committee's hearing. Charges have been made that C. I. O. leaders were censoring the mail in Ohio cities and refusing to permit delivery of parcel post packages containing food, clothing and other "irregular" articles for workers in the plants.

"All mail from the post office department sent fit to attempt to deliver must be delivered," said Cummings. This did not conflict with the post office department's refusal to deliver packages to the plants, but sought to prosecute persons who tried to prevent the delivery of mail the department had okayed.

Rebels Again Eye Madrid

HAVING taken Bilbao after months of siege, Gen. Francisco Franco, rebel commander, turned his guns once more upon Madrid and the sector north of Guadalajara. New troops were moved into the sections along the western and southern limits of the city.

The loyalist government set out at one to strengthen its own lines, although it was not believed Madrid was in much danger of attack before the insurgents have "cleaned up" the northern provinces. Since the capture of Bilbao the Basque and Asturian forces have been virtually isolated from those of the Madrid-Vallencia government.

Hopkins Slices WPA Rolls

WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION HARRY L. HOPKINS is busy trimming 314,759 rolls of the WPA rolls, to shave the total to 1,655,477 by mid-July. The cut was to be effected "simply" through not replacing men who found jobs in private industry" and by combing the lists for ineligible. WPA officials emphasized the need for economy by comparing the estimated $2,175,000,000 spent in 1937 with the $1,500,000,000 approved by congress for relief in fiscal 1938.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field

FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington.—Elaborate maneuvering is going on to put Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, in the house of representatives from the twelfth Texas district, now represented by Fritz Garland Lanham.

Under the Texas law, a special election to fill a vacancy is more or less a free-for-all. There is no primary, there is no runoff. Everybody who wants to enters, and the high man takes the prize. Once in, the incumbent has a big advantage at the next regular primary, and of course a Democrat has no trouble in the election if he weathers the primary.

Lanham has been in the house since Woodrow Wilson's last congress and has been elected at regular elections beginning with 1920, which makes him rather a veteran. He has developed quite a streak of insurgency, being out of sympathy with a good many New Deal measures. In short, he is more of a Garner man than a Roosevelt man.

Nobody is claiming the honor of having first thought of the plan to put young Roosevelt in his place, but it has been taken up with some enthusiasm by the Texas delegation, and has not exactly been frowned on by the White House.

Texans on the inside of the maneuver want Lanham "promoted." They say he has had a splendid record, but has become slightly fed up with service in the house.

Just a few days ago the Texas delegation voted to endorse Lanham for president of the University of Texas, which post is vacant because of the death of the former president.

That would be much simpler than the original idea, which was to have the administration give Lanham a more important job. Among the jobs considered for him are that of assistant secretary of state, made vacant by the promotion of Sumner Welles to under-secretary of state, and a post with the Communications commission.

Some Embarrassment

But there is a slight embarrassment on the part of the White House to make an appointment so obviously to clear the way to putting the President's son in the house. Kicking a man upstairs to get rid of him is something else again. It is one of the most often used political devices. Sometimes it does not work, as when President Coolidge "promoted" Senator William S. Kenyon to be a judge at a time when Kenyon was a progressive senator was a thorn in the administration's side. But Kenyon was shortly thereafter—at the next regular election—replaced by Smith Wildman Brookhart, which was more or less jumping out of the frying pan into the fire.

So the White House would be very pleased at having the way cleared for Elliott, by some other method than by giving Lanham a political election—replaced by Smith Wildman Brookhart, which was more or less jumping out of the frying pan into the fire.

The scheme works out to Elliott should land the job handsily, Texans say. They predict that a large number of candidates would enter the "free-for-all" with the result that the opposition would be divided, and enough people would vote for the magic name of Roosevelt to pull Elliott through. Elliott has been living in Fort Worth for several years, and is reported to be popular.

Seek U. S. Help

The German drive to have the United States join in development of dirigible transatlantic travels continues, but it seems unlikely to be authorized this year. Dr. Hugo Eckener, most successful navigator of dirigibles so far, is most persuasive. He has met most of the arguments against the idea. But two of the arguments he has met most effectively promise to stay the hand of congress for this session.

One of the objections, of course, is the shock still remaining from the Hindenburg tragedy. Every one, including our naval experts, agrees that this would not have been a disaster at all had the big bag been filled with helium instead of explosive hydrogen. But the fact remains that so many people throughout the country were and still are shocked at the Hindenburg disaster, and still remember that this ended the last delusion about lighter than air transport—the delusion that the Germans at least had solved the problem—that there is no popular demand for action.

So when a senator or representative opposes doing anything about it, or, as is more usual, when he simply makes no move to cause action, there is no unfavorable reaction against him among the voters he must face when he comes up for re-election.

The other argument is wrapped up in the neutrality propaganda. When Doctor Eckener was before the congressional committees he was criticized closely about the danger of helium, sold to Germany by the United States or possibly in United States dirigibles while they might be abroad and seized during a war, being used for war purposes.

Dirigibles in War

Doctor Eckener made two most effective answers, so far as logic is concerned, according to army and navy officers who have been studying the situation since. One was that the dirigible would not be an effective weapon in war today. He said they would be easy victims of airplanes and anti-aircraft artillery. In fact, this stage had really been reached, he said, before the close of the World war.

But—and this was much more convincing—if nations did want to use dirigibles in war, they would not be deterred by the lack of helium. They would use hydrogen despite the greater danger.

Doctor Eckener's remarks along this line have been closely studied by our army and navy aviation experts. Their thought is that the nation which would decide to use a dirigible in war would probably prefer to use hydrogen. The advantage would be that the lifting power of hydrogen is greater than that of helium. Therefore the same gas bag could carry a heavier load of bombs, more defensive guns, etc.

A dirigible supported by hydrogen could rise more quickly in an emergency, thus escaping anti-aircraft guns.

New Dealers Worry

Two of the groups of the "submerged third" of our population which are giving the New Dealers the most gray hairs are the small farmers, particularly the mountaineers, and the folks who work in very small stores and factories, and hence do not come under the wage and hour legislation now pending.

The mountaineers are particularly troublesome. In the first place they do not seem to appreciate what is done for them. They want, apparently, to retain their "rugged individualism." None of the resettlement projects which were the apple of Rexford G. Tugwell's eye, and which so intrigued Mrs. Roosevelt, have been notably successful. Quite the contrary.

Yet they are being hit and will be hit by most of the New Deal legislation harder than most folks. While they do not buy much, naturally payroll social security taxes, and state sales taxes necessitated by the social burdens the states have assumed, boost the cost of everything they buy. Thus not only is their buying power reduced but their lot made just that much harder.

A group of congressmen and their wives who just returned from a trip to the Smoky Mountain national park, on the border of North Carolina and Tennessee, brought back a vivid impression of how the social welfare legislation, both state and national, is hitting this particular segment of the submerged third.

"We didn't go off the beaten track," said the wife of one. "We weren't looking for anything but scenery. But we were shocked at the living conditions of the mountain folk living right along the main highway. Women were working in the fields, just as animal-like as in the most backward sections of Europe. We didn't see any hitched plows, as in the recent disgraceful case which figured in the newspapers, but we could imagine they often were."

Pitiful Conditions

"It was pitiful—the scrubby, rocky land they were tilling, the squalid, dirty cabins they called homes, and the cruel grinding daylight to darkness labor they were putting in so futilely."

"Yet we knew by our own purchases that when those folks went down to the store to buy something they not only paid a higher price because of payroll taxes to give somebody else old age and unemployment insurance, but they were in North Carolina, paying a three per cent sales tax. When we got up into West Virginia, we found, incidentally, that there were no exemptions, as in many states, from this sales tax, which here was two per cent."

"My state of Illinois has a three per cent sales tax, but when a poor man buys a sandwich and a cup of coffee—anything not more than 15 cents—that purchase is exempt. But in West Virginia the sales tax on a ten cent purchase is ten per cent, not two per cent, because they do not have tokens to split pennies."

The difficulty the New Deal anticipates with small, local groups of employees is a matter of constitutional law. Some believe that is why President Roosevelt is so determined about his Supreme court enlargement bill despite the recent liberality of the present court. He wants, they say, to be able to reach the little store or plant which employs three to fifteen men or women. Political danger in such a move would be very real, but it is these employees who work longer hours, for less pay, on the average, than the workers who by union activities better their conditions, and who will be affected by the wages and hours bill when that measure has become law.

Deer Sleeps in Bed, Goes to School

Early to bed and early to rise (not TOO early) is the rule for Pete, the pet of the Raymond Beckett family in Barneget, N. J. "After we feed him, he goes upstairs and takes a nap, spending as much as half a day in bed," says Mrs. Beckett. "Last year he didn't miss a single day following the children to school. He likes pork and hot dogs and bananas." He is shown above attending school and (inset) taking his daily siesta.

HOW OL' MISTAH BUZZARD WARMS HIS TOES

OFTEN and often had Peter Rabbit wondered how Ol' Mista Buzzard and all his other feathered friends who had flown away to the far away south at the first hint that Jack Frost was on his way to the Green Meadows spent the long winter. It seemed to Peter that the South must be a very wonderful and very strange place. He was not at all sure that he would like it. It must be very nice not to have to worry about finding enough to eat, and yet—well, Peter did have lots of fun in the snow. It seemed to him that all those little people who went away certainly missed a great deal. Now, Winsome Bluebird had returned from that far away South with the good news that Mista Buzzard was not far behind, and Winsome had promised to tell him all the news of Ol' Mista Buzzard and the other friends.

"You see," began Winsome, "Ol' Mista Buzzard was born and brought up in the South, where it is always warm, and he just can't stand cold weather. No, sir, he can't stand cold weather. Why, weather that you and I would call comfortable will make him shiver and shake. That is why he wasn't ready to come up with me. Now, I come ahead of Mista Buzzard, but Ol' Mista Buzzard won't start until he is sure that Mista Buzzard has been here some time, and he will be sure not to have cold feet."

"Cold feet!" cried Peter. "Who ever heard of such a thing! Why, I run around on the snow and ice all winter long and I never have cold feet."

head, why you just look for him on a toe-warmer." Peter's eyes seemed to fairly pop out with curiosity. "What's a toe-warmer?" he demanded. "I never heard of such a thing. What does it look like?"

Winsome Bluebird chuckled softly. "Have you ever been up by Farmer Brown's house?" he asked. Peter nodded. "Then you've seen that thing on the roof out of which smoke sometimes comes," continued Winsome. Again Peter nodded. "Well," continued Winsome, "if Farmer Brown's house was down South that thing out of which smoke comes would be one of Ol' Mista Buzzard's toe-warmer."

Peter looked sharply at Winsome to see if he really meant what he said. "Doesn't anybody live in those houses down South?" he asked suspiciously. "Of course," replied Winsome. "If they didn't how could Mista Buzzard warm his toes?"

"And he isn't afraid?" persisted Peter, as if it was very hard to believe. "Afraid!" cried Winsome. "Why, he hasn't anything to be afraid of. Mr. Buzzard is thought a great deal of, a very great deal of, in the South, and no one would hurt him for the world. So every house has a toe-warmer for him, which is very nice for him. And you won't see him back here until it is so warm that he forgets all about cold feet," concluded Winsome Bluebird. © T. W. Burgess.—WNU Service.

First Aid to the Ailing House

CLEANING TILE WORK

I HAVE not kept count of the number of housekeepers who have asked me how to clean white tiles on a bathroom floor. They explain that they have scoured and scrubbed, but that floor still looks soiled. As dirt on a tile floor does not soak in, but remains on the surface, scouring will take it off. So when I hear of a white tile floor that cannot be cleaned, I know the reason: that the tile is of a low quality and that the grayish look is from dark particles actually in the tile. There is no remedy for this short of the replacement of the floor. High quality floor tiles contain no dark particles, which is one of the reasons for the quality. Quality drops when the materials of which tiles are made are less carefully selected.

Rubbing with steel wool will show whether or not it is surface dirt that gives a grayish look to a floor. This will take off dirt to the bare tile, and if a gray tone remains, nothing more can be done.

There is little difference in the wearing qualities of low grade and high grade white floor tile; one will last as long as the other. It is the clearness of the white tones that makes the difference. One remedy, as I have said, is to take up the old tile and to lay a new floor of better quality. As an alternative, one owner laid linoleum over the old tile, cementing it down on a layer of felt.

Wall tile differ from floor tile in being finished with a high glaze. The glaze repels dirt, and is easily cleaned. Even so, with the steam in a bathroom, and possibly grease and smut in the air, there may be a dulling, and in particular, the cement in the joints will darken. This can be completely removed and the cement whitened by wiping the tiles from time to time with a solution of one of the bleaching liquids which can be obtained at a grocer's. In a number of households that I know, it is the routine to treat tiles in bathrooms and kitchens in this way at least once a month.

Question—I have a leather covered chair. On the edges, the leather is beginning to look dry. What can I use to keep it from drying out?

Answer—There is a preparation on the market that is intended for that purpose; you should be able to get it at a leather store. It is widely used for preserving leather book bindings; you might get it at a book store. Your local public library may have it. Otherwise, wipe the leather with a half and half mixture of castor oil and pure neatsfoot oil; after a little time for soaking in, wipe the leather dry. This preservative will work better on wet leather than on dry; so before applying, go over the leather with a wet cloth. For a glossy finish, wipe the leather when dry with beaten white of egg. © By Roger B. Whitman WNU Service.

THERE'S A GOOD ROAD

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH (Suggested by the hotel barber at Uhrichsville, Ohio.)

THERE'S a good road north, and a good road south, And a good road east or west, There's a train at noon that'll leave here soon, If you like the railroad best. So when someone says that there's somethin' wrong With the town, the way it's run, Then I don't see why he don't say good-by, And go hunt for a better one.

If he says back home where he used to live That the town was simply great, Well, I'd go back there if I had the fare, And if not, I'd flip a freight, Or he's heard some town is a right good town, That it's got this whole place beat; Well, it can't be far if he's got a car, If he ain't, he's got two feet.

So if someone thinks that the town's no good, I think he's a fool to stay. If he don't like what this here town has got, Then here's all I got to say: "There ain't a man that'll hold you here If you like some new place best; North or south of town not a bridge is down, There's a good road east or west."

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis © Public Ledger, Inc.

CREATIVE ability is one of Destiny's most valuable gifts. The skilled and helpfully minded palmist may often stimulate latent creative ability to constructive activities along worthwhile lines which the fortunate possessor has been indolent in following. Analyze the third finger with a view to explaining, broadly at least, the possible outlets for the creative urge as indicated by its conformation as a type. The Psychic Finger of Brilliance.

Here is a type of third finger which, unless your analysis is made with thoroughness, may be confused with the Inventive type discussed in Lesson 39. The reason for this is that it leans toward the fourth finger much after the fashion of the Inventive type. In the Psychic Finger of Brilliance this characteristic is far more pronounced, however, and with the hand extended wide, the entire finger is found to lie much closer to the fourth finger. The Psychic type of third finger, despite its tilt toward the fourth finger, is usually quite straight. Its length is marked, and its tip is above the tip of the second finger. The entire finger is rather bony in structure, with knuckles somewhat knobby and the spaces between them bound in or "corseted." The nail is usually long and somewhat pear-shaped, and is always well set. Under backward pressure, a peculiar resilient tension is felt. WNU Service.

FARMERS' COLUMN

THE FAEM AND HOME

A little cream improves the taste of cottage cheese, altho it is not necessary. Salt may be added to suit the taste, either when it is worked or when it is eaten. Usually about a level teaspoonful to the pound is enough.

A 16 pound young turkey tom has eaten approximately 64 pounds of feed, and an 8 pound capon about the same amount. Hence it is more profitable to produce turkeys than capons if the death rate is low in both cases.

Lespedeza is perhaps the most productive legume that can be grown in Kentucky without soil treatment, and yet applications of lime and phosphate usually increase hay and pasture sufficiently to pay the cost of treatment in a short time.

Estimating acreage by the number of plants set where tobacco is checked as in western Kentucky is considered satisfactory, provided the correct number of plants per acre is used in the calculation.

The child's daily ration should include at least a pint of milk and preferably a quart; butter at every meal; cereal, bread, or potato at every meal; at least two vegetables other than potatoes; fruit, eggs or meat, or both; and a little sweets at end of meal.

If washing in cold water does not remove grass stains from clothing, moisten the spots with kerosene, let stand a short time, and then wash with soap and water. Alcohol or ether will dissolve the green coloring matter when the material cannot be washed.

Pasture Changes for Stock

Animal rotation is as essential as crop rotation; that is, animals should not be raised year after year on the same land, any more than the same crop should be grown continuously, is an idea advanced by Dr. F. E. Hull, animal pathologist at the agricultural experiment station of the university of Kentucky.

To help hold diseases and pests in check, Dr. Hull would change pasture, lots, and ranges at least every two years. The land should either be cultivated for two years or other kinds of stock run on it, he says. Few diseases and parasites of animals pass from one species to another. This makes it feasible to follow cattle with sheep, hogs, or horses, or so to rotate the kind of stock that none remains on the same land more than two years at a time.

Especially it is wise to have clean pasture for young animals, it is pointed out. Mares, sows, and ewes should be treated for parasites in the fall. As soon as the foals, pigs, or lambs are born the young and their mothers should be placed in fields that have not been used by the same species of animal for the past two years.

Manure is the principal carrier of the eggs and larvae of internal parasites. Where manure is spread in fields used by stock, it should be plowed under promptly to destroy eggs and larvae, according to this Kentucky scientist.

CANNING DEMONSTRATIONS

We are glad to announce that Miss Frances Shoemaker, food preservation specialist, will put on two canning demonstrations in this county. These demonstrations are for the people of Morgan county. Miss Shoemaker's academic training, teaching experience, commercial experience, and extension service experience qualify her well for her job. She has written several bulletins on canning. The two demonstrations will be held as follows:

West Liberty, 10:00 a.m., Wednesday, July 14.
Crockett, 10:00 a.m., Thursday, July 15.

It is suggested that each one bring a sandwich or two along, as the demonstration will take most of the day. Ball Brothers Co. has agreed to furnish the cans for these demonstrations.

Begin now to make plans to attend one of these demonstrations. These demonstrations will consist of giving out information, answering questions, and actually canning several different kinds of foods.

Kentucky law permits betting on the horses at the race tracks; but betting on them elsewhere is a crime. There is something wrong with such a law. At both Covington and Lexington, efforts have recently been made to close up the "hand books" there. At Covington, a jury acquitted a defendant on a hand book charge, but convicted him of operating a hazard game. The judge assailed the jury for such action, and stated that "until there has been a healthy change of attitude in the minds of Kenton county citizens toward enforcing the law" he would try no more such cases.—Russell Times.

The Shelby fiscal court has recognized a potentially dangerous situation in ordering that heavy wire screens be fixed around barred openings at the county jail. Facetiously, it proves that "iron bars do not a prison make," or some such saying. The fact of the matter is, open bars at windows prevent only the prisoner from leaving bodily. Of course one couldn't expect to push a grand piano or table thru the narrow openings, but a prisoner can do wonders with a file or saw tossed thru by some accomplice. And, too, it is embarrassing to learn that prisoners may become really intoxicated while incarcerated, thanks to a piece of string tied to a bottle of liquor. Heavy wire screening provides the solution of these problems, or at least makes explanations easier.—Shelby News.

FIDELITY & THE COUNTY SEAT

As I have written these hundred articles on "Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore," I have drawn heavily on my memories of thirty and forty years ago, when I lived near the little village that used to bear the name of Fidelity. Its name has long been something else, but I like to think of it always by its earlier name; for that suggests quaint people, old times, self-sufficient country life, and a little world in the hills almost untouched by what we sometimes call civilization but what could better be called standardization. It was and is a small place, perched on some hills that have not crawled away with the sand. It grew up in the very earliest days of the Jackson Purchase and has had its proportionate share in carrying on the work of the world. Since my contemporaries at Fidelity were never ashamed of themselves and did not try to hide behind the county seat, why should I? I was not of or from the county seat and not even a resident of Fidelity itself, though we got the mail there twice a week and traded eggs and butter and frying chickens for sugar and coffee there. There was the place to vote, and near there was the one room country school that stood as a bulwark against ignorance. I know it did, for the county superintendent told us children when he visited our school and prophesied that one of us might become president or governor. We are still waiting, hoping that a man so great as he would not have prophesied in vain.

But, when I come to think of it,

Fidelity had about everything that any other place had. There were homes, not fine ones, it is true, or comfortable ones; but they sent forth their quota of average citizens and an occasional one who rose above the average. There were food, clothing, shelter, romance, sorrow, religion, education, neighborliness; what more could you ask? The country doctor was there, and the blacksmith, and the occasional pack peddlers and clock tinkers. There were two stores, one that contained drugs and sundries and the postoffice; the other was a general store, where you could buy a curry comb or a plow point or a hamstring or a yard of unbleached domestic or a package of sugar. On the hill that rose above the other hills of the village stood a union church, open to every faith on the face of the globe and to every kind of public gathering from a clown's show to a political speaking, if these two are different things.

You who have been foolish enough to read all or some of these articles have known or may have lived in such places as Fidelity. You got some education in the rural school, but what probably has been of infinitely more worth to you as men was the education you acquired by just living among people, people of all sorts and conditions. You may not have had the experiences that I have told about, but yours were so similar that you have had no trouble in bridging the gap between your life and mine. And the beauty of our life is that others acquiring, quite as painlessly as we did, the same fine store of ideas, to enjoy them in years that are yet to be. Fidelity is still there, and other Fidelities are ready to equip boys and girls with experiences that made your childhood and mine not the empty things that top-lofty cynics would call them but treasure houses of poetic and adventurous life.—Kentucky Folklore Series.

American, Turkish Tobacco Tobacco is native to America. It is not known when it was introduced into Turkey, but there it has lost many of its American characteristics. The plant has a smaller, thinner leaf and a pungent, spicy taste.

Coking of Coal Is Greatly Improved by New Method

Better and Cheaper Product Promised

Pittsburgh, Pa. — Cheaper, better and more versatile coking of coal is in prospect as the result of five years of fundamental research at the Coal Research Laboratory of the Carnegie Institute of Technology here.

By breaking with traditional methods of turning bituminous coal into coke, gas, tar and chemicals, William B. Warren explained here recently to some leading industrialists, it should be possible for coke oven operators to decrease cost, cut operating time by a third, while improving quality and yield of coke. Mr. Warren recommended that coal be pre-conditioned before coking by warming it to 200-400 degrees Centigrade (400-750 degrees Fahrenheit). This precarbonization treatment could be carried out in low temperature apparatus that is much less expensive than the coke ovens themselves.

Mr. Warren's Theory. Delving into just what happens when coal is heated and carbonized, Mr. Warren evolved a theory. This theory, applied to practical operation of coke ovens, promises the large economies.

First, when coal is heated the large molecules break apart into much smaller units. At slightly higher temperatures, surface changes take place within the coal that cause the little units to recombine into larger ones once more. This takes place slowly and this temperature must be held for a time. Then as the temperature is raised real thermal decomposition takes place. The surface of the molecules are attacked and portions torn off, appearing as tar and gas.

By manipulating the process so that the molecules have large surfaces, which means the molecules are small in size, more tar is produced at the expense of coke. Or if tar is not desired, the high temperatures can be used when the molecules are large.

There is hope that the new knowledge of coking will allow the making of coke from coals which are not at present considered "coking coals."

One-sixth of all the coal produced in the United States is coked and the new methods promised by the Carnegie Institute's researches are for that reason of great economic importance. From coal, in addition to coke and gas, come ammonia and a vast array of drugs, perfumes, chemicals and dyes made from the coal tar.

All Elements Are Found in Every Part of Earth

Berlin.—Gold in "them thar hills?" Certainly. There is gold in every hill, in the dirt under your feet—in fact, gold in every mineral particle on earth.

Not only gold, but radium, platinum, common iron and lead, and every one of the whole list of 92 elements known to chemistry. These may be so little that they can't be measured by even the most delicate of commonly used chemical methods of analysis, but they are all present just the same.

This doctrine of the "omnipresence of all elements" is put forth by Drs. Walter and Ida Noddack, German chemists famous for their discovery of the two exceedingly rare elements, rhenium and mendelevium. The Noddacks are masters of some of the most sensitive methods of analysis ever devised, so that they are entitled to speak with authority.

Mixed in Fluid Form. This complete mixing of all the earth's ingredients, they hold, took place back near the beginning of geologic history, when the earth was still in fluid form, and "boiling" actively.

The practical significance of the idea of elemental omnipresence is that chemists should always state to how many decimal places they have carried any given analysis. They are not entitled to say of any element, "not present," or "concentration zero," but only, "not found in the concentration examined."

This point of view, the Noddacks believe, has real significance for chemical analysis as used in industry, medicine, and many other daily-life applications.

TEACHERS' CONFERENCE

The county wide teachers' conference will be held July 19 and 20 in the new high school auditorium.

The rural schools are just about ready to begin for the school year 1937-38. Altho we have just finished a very interesting year, we must look forward to a better year. A few weeks ago we dedicated a new high school building. It is pleasing to announce that we have to offer to the children and teachers a modern school plant. Let us, as Mrs. Roosevelt said, dedicate this building to the childhood of this county in order that we might have a better Morgan county in which to live. I am eagerly looking forward to the day when Morgan county will have better roads, better schools, by a fine system of transportation that will provide high school opportunities for all, whether rich or poor. I solicit the support of every father and mother in my endeavor to get more young boys and girls in school. We have eight more new school buildings to dedicate this year to the children of our county. Indeed, it makes me happy to think of it, altho it has been a hard, wearisome job. I am so proud of the people of Morgan county I cannot find words to express my appreciation. Congressman A. J. May contacted me on the street and said, "Mr. Haney, Morgan county is getting all of the WPA." I said, "No. We are getting no more money than our neighbors, but our people have cooperated, worked hard, and have more to show for the money spent. A people united can do much."

We have a splendid teachers' conference planned. You may note below the splendid talent that will appear on the program. Everybody is especially invited to attend this conference.

NYA IN MORGAN COUNTY

The national youth administration has provided part time employment for 743 young men and women in Morgan county since its establishment in June, 1935.

Out of this number 421 were enabled to remain in school and continue their education thru the NYA. The remainder, 322, are youths not attending school, between the ages of 16 and 25. These youths are working on NYA work projects and the purpose of these projects is to provide occupational training and experience which will be an advantage to them in earning a livelihood.

The national youth administration projects have been a great help also to the communities in which they are located, at Wrigley, Cannel City, Crockett, and West Liberty. They have painted school buildings and repaired roofs, the cost of which would have been at least $400; cleaned and tinned several community cemeteries; worked and packed several county roads in these different communities; built sidewalks and flower beds on school properties.

Our two manual training shops at West Liberty and Ezel have been making furniture for the schools, tablet arm chairs have been made, and library tables, teachers' desks, nursery tables and chairs. Lumber for this was furnished by the NYA and co-sponsor, Morgan county board of education. The value of these finished articles would be about $7,000.

The two sewing centers at West Liberty and Cannel City are making garments, using girl youth labor. At least 3,000 garments have been made and distributed to the needy families in Morgan county. These garments would average near 50c a garment, which would total near $1,500. All material was bought by NYA.

LOOKING FORWARD

As the school year of 1937-38 is about to begin let us look forward and see how we can make the most of the year. Let us concentrate on three or four fundamentals which can be held clearly in mind thru the year. What purposes shall we choose?

First, make up your mind that you are going to be happy and to make others happy. Happiness is largely a matter of temperament and will. One can be what he determines to be. Civilization may be going to pieces, our country may be in great confusion; your community may be in a bad state; your school may be badly housed or your assignment may be untrue. Others have similar difficulties and they rise above them, why not you?

Second, resolve to build up in some way the personal character of each child in your care. Character in its broadest and best sense is the goal of all education. The aim is to develop purpose and a sense of responsibility within the child itself. He tends to get his sense of values from his elders and companions. Wise teachers and parents keep in mind the character traits they wish to develop and seize every opportunity to dramatize them to the child.

Third, determine to keep close to home and community life and to do something to create a more wholesome environment for child growth and development. Only thru cooperation and the creation of positive public sentiment can results be had. Attitude is a vital factor in character. Let the aim be to set in motion constructive forces and activities in the home, school, church, and neighborhood so that everyone accepts the fact that children come first and that no practices be continued that will be harmful to them. A strong public sentiment can work wonders.

Fourth, do your full part in the work of professional organization. If teacher organization remains only partly effective while other forces mobilize all their power, we should not be surprised if schools are crippled and the processes of civilization are reversed. We should accept the goal: "One hundred percent enrollment in local, state, and national associations with every teacher at work on the problems of the profession." Can you lead one additional person to accept this goal? The greatest favor one teacher can pay for another is to set him upon the path of personal and professional growth. Professional organization will help them to maintain the gains made during their years of preparation. This adds to their power and prestige.

WAL. W. MCGUIRE

SEWING PROJECT

Cannel City NYA sewing project announced their opening day June 30. The girls worked extremely hard to accomplish their best for the display being offered for parents, friends and others who were interested.

The day proved to be very satisfactory, disclosing many beautiful garments, including dresses, shirts, slips, overalls, dainty handwork of embroidered objects such as gowns, infants wardrobe, scarfs, cushion tops etc. Also a variety of hooked rugs, quilts, and a great many other garments.

Persons present were well pleased with the work and the arrangement of the sewing work was considered decidedly nice.

The spark had touched the tow. "You wonder that Will was so careless? What then do you think of yourself?"

"Myself? I do not understand you, Eleanor."

"Then I see that I must forge the meaning into words that often say too little or too much. Your wrong is to Will even more than to me. It is nearly two years now that, by your indifference to everything concerning me, you have led, may I say, your friend into the unhappy position of falling in love with your wife?"

"Eleanor!"

"Yes, with me, Eleanor Vance! Tonight the crisis came. Disappointed beyond expression, and too tired to resist the depression of disappointment, coupled with the recklessness of the drunken chauffeur I was driven to the mistake of tears. Will told me that he loved me and I was glad! It is a long time since I have heard such words. Stop! you, above all men, should not blame him; instead you owe him an apology. You put him in your place as my protector, my companion, why should he not speak the words you have forgotten? He asked nothing. His was a free will gift!"

Vance, who was growing ashy white, sat leaning forward, his hands clenching the chair arms, his eyes, over which he had lost power of control, fixed on her face.

"The hurt to him is twofold," Eleanor continued, "cruel, that he has so cold-hearted a friend, and bitter since his love could only serve to stir up memories in the woman that pushed her further from his reach, and the pain lay with her to tell him of his mistake."

"When Will cried out to me in the dark, I heard his words, but the voice speaking them with tenderness was the voice of the man whom I married ten years ago. Then it was that I knew that the touch of another would be sin."

"All through the rest of those slow frozen hours my one thought was to reach you, to tell you this, and that I would not live with you in such bondage another hour! You have dominated joy out of my life by leaving nothing in it for me to do. I must find that other man who loved me and who, like me, who loved me and looked love, the man whom I married that we might share and share alike and be the whole, each to the other, I must find him, or else live out my life alone!"

Still Vance sat leaning forward, immovable, his thin lips dilating, his teeth clenched through his under lip until the blood started.

"I had hope," Eleanor continued, pressing her hand to her eyes as if to shut in a picture that sight would drive away, "until we found ourselves on the Glen highway where the great electric light hangs higher over the trolley terminal and we stopped to borrow a lantern at the forge. Then presently I lost hope, for I learned there that the man I married was not only dead to me, but that he was dead also to himself. Why is Joseph Hess taking shelter in your father's old forge on Christmas Eve?"

Swiftly, yet with incisive detail, she told of the finding of the children and of the scene within the shed.

"Hess—here—in want? His wife and baby in the old forge?"

Vance paused abruptly, his words severed as by a sword of light. Unseen by Eleanor the door from the back hall was opened slowly, and on the threshold stood Tommy, carrying a big brass candlestick, his eyes fixed upon the candle flame, that would flicker and flare.

Seeing his father he set the light upon the floor and running to him threw himself into his arms, crying:

"Oh father! Christmas did happen ever so long ago just as you said, but do you know every year since then God has been sending Christ-babies to people who sort of forgot about it to make them feel kind? Sister and I saw the Star tonight and we followed it and there, sure enough, was a dear little Christ-baby and Mary and Joseph. There wouldn't have been a thing on the baby's poor mite of a tree if we hadn't played that we were the Wise Men and took him Uncle Will's gold piece and the sweet soap for incense and the cake!"

"Now you'll take an interest in our tree, won't you, father, since Christmas has all happened over again right near home? There's your little first red shoes on our tree full of candy, one shoe for you and one for mother, 'cause grandmother says you were her little Christ-baby once, though I guess you never knew it. She knows it all though, 'cause she talks to God, every night, I hear her in her room."

Slowly Vance's head dropped to the boy's shoulder and his arms closed so tightly about him that Tommy struggled for breath, while sobs tore at the man's throat until the agony was quenched by a flood of tears.

Very gently Eleanor released her son, who in an awestruck whisper said, "I didn't mean to frighten father by coming in so soft, only grandmother said if I'd go to sleep we'd light the tree in the morning and I've been asleep and when I woke up I asked her for a drink and what time it was and she said, 'It's morning, darling, Christmas Morning.' So then I heard you and father talking and I came down right away."

"Yes, it is morning," Eleanor said, looking Tommy to the stairs, "but you must go to sleep for another while. Father and mother have both traveled a long, long way since dark, longer than anybody knows, and they need to be alone. And remember, little son, when a strong man is so weary that the tears must come, no one speaks about it, that is what it means to a man."

At the stair top stood The Stranger, and as Eleanor turned he came quickly toward her. Raising her face between his hands he kissed her on the forehead. "Peace, Peace on Earth!" The words sounded to her soul, for he had not spoken.

Then she took off her hat and coat, and leaving them on the rack, went back into the sitting-room, closing the door. At her step coming lightly toward him Vance looked up. Tired and disheveled as he was the marks of many years had vanished from his face and in his eyes there shone a new expression, new yet old.

"Eleanor!" he said, holding out his arms, "Oh, Eleanor, at last I know, have come home. Is it too late?"

Still standing before him, her hands clasped shyly to her breast, she said in soft low tones that yet were not a whisper:

"Oh, man that I married, why did you stay away so long? Yet how can I be wholly sure that it is really you?"

For answer he caught her up as if she had been a child, and, holding her close, kissed her upon the lips.

When the children came down in the late morning twilight, the tree was already lighted. "For a surprise," Bess cried, though no one would confess to having done it. Without, the snow that had fallen since early morning was bedding down the frozen fields comfortably and draping the great pines in the Glen so that each one was a Christmas tree.

Grandmother and grandfather gathered about the breakfast table with Eleanor and Emery, but the children kept fluttering to and fro from the tree, babbling and going into ecstasies.

"Isn't it beautiful and we fixed it all ourselves," Bess announced for the twentieth time. "It took twelve hard chops to cut it down," added Tommy.

"Where is my Stranger?" piped Bess. "I was going to let him light the tallest candles and now it's lit and he isn't here at all!" Then they all realized that there was an empty place at table.

European, American Plan

When a hotel is operated on the European plan the guest pays a stipulated amount for his lodging only. If he eats at the hotel he pays for his meals separately, just as if he were eating at an independent grill or restaurant. Under the American plan the guest pays for both lodging and meals at a regular rate. In the early history of the United States most of the inns and hotels were run on the American plan, but now there are very few hotels operated on this plan except in the smaller cities and at resorts. The European plan prevails in most foreign countries. In this country some hotels combine both plans, leaving it to the wish of the guest to pay a regular rate for lodging only or for both lodging and meals.

Lesson for July 11

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 3:1-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Come now therefore, and I will send thee—Exodus 3:10.
PRIMARY TOPIC—How God Answered His People's Prayer.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Leader in the Making.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Get Ready to Work for God.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How God Provides Leaders Today.

God calls men, commissions and uses them to carry out his plans and purposes in the earth. What a great truth that is and how it glorifies the destiny of man to know that it is divinely appointed. As Joseph Parker beautifully points out, the experience of Moses in Midian was a direct dealing with God, whereas we who may not be able to "see the fountain" must "be content to drink at the stream," but should always remember that the stream flows from that same fountain.

Every man should put to himself the questions—What is my destiny? What does God mean me to be and to do in the world? . . . It is a most pitiful thing that a man should read of Moses being divinely called . . . to a special work" and fail to realize "that God has a special work for every man to do." Let us have a care that we do not "so pervert and misinterpret circumstances as to press them into a justification of self-will," rather than recognize them as "destiny which is beckoning us to duty."

For our instruction and guidance we consider then the story of the call of this outstanding leader of Israel. It presents him as a true servant of God—one who was

I. Personally Equipped.

While it is a blessed truth that God will use any man who surrenders himself to his control and guidance no matter how limited that man's ability and training may be, it is also true that, other things being equal, the man with the best equipment will be the most useful servant.

God gave Moses a unique preparation. He was first of all a Hebrew, born among the people that he was to lead. He knew the luxury and all the cultural advantages of the Egyptian court (Acts 7:22). He was the son of a Pharaoh's daughter, and he had been trained by his own mother as his nurse. He observed at first hand the oppression of his people and made a self-willed and impulsive effort to deal with the problem. The result was that he had a "postgraduate" course of instruction in discipline and devotion. Let us remember where he spent forty years in the school of experience.

The leaders of God in our day need training. Some best receive it in schools, in Christian colleges, seminaries, and Bible schools true to the faith. Others prepare in the home, the church, and in the "universities of hard knocks"—as someone has called the school of experience. Perhaps the best preparation is a balanced combination of the two, school and experience. But the important thing is to be prepared for God's call.

II. Spiritually Qualified.

Moses was a man who knew God. Had he been a worldly man he would have been a victim of the phenomenon of the burning bush. But note how alert and reverent he was and how immediately responsive to the instructions and the call of God.

All the training and preparation in the world is worse than useless in God's service apart from that spiritual qualification that comes from restoration to and dedication to him. There is no more pathetic sight than a spiritually powerless church worker "going through the motions" of service for Christ. If we are in that condition we may be sure that we deceive no one but ourselves. Let us seek God in confession and in glad acceptance of his provision for both our redemption and our sanctification.

III. Divinely Called.

Moses was called (vv. 4), commissioned (vv. 6-10), and clad with divine authority (vv. 11-12) for his great task.

God calls his servants to different responsibilities and in different ways, but the important thing is that we should know that we are in his will and that we are answering his call.

No man or woman has any right to choose full-time Christian service simply as a desirable vocation, for it is a divine calling. Quite unscriptural was the attitude of the man who said that in a quiet woodland nook he had faced life's realities and had decided "to bet his life" on the preaching of the gospel.

On Giving of Alms

In giving of thy alms, inquire not so much into the person, as his necessity. God looks not so much upon the merits of him that requires, as into the manner of him that relieves; if the man deserve not, thou has given it to humanity.

Sense of Humor

A sense of humor enables us not so much to laugh at the people who provoke us, as to laugh at ourselves for being so easily provoked.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Comfort in Traveling.
LATELY, on a cross-country prowl, two of us invaded one of the remotest corners of the desert.

Until our car broke down we crawled along some of the roughest backways in creation, then escaped on what by quaint irony was called a luxury train with speed we found a prehistoric railway line.

When we hit concrete high roads and a i r - conditioned fliers, I caught myself saying our fathers put up with plenty of misery in order to move about. And then I realized that what we had endured did not date back to former generations. So soon have we grown accustomed to luxury with speed we forget that most of America, fifteen years ago, lacked what we now accept as common traveling comfort.

Why, less than two decades ago, for my sins, I rode on a certain jerk-water railroad in the deep South. The last work done on its tracks was in 1864 by General Sherman—he tore 'em up.

I made the mistake of trying to shave while en route. When I got through, I looked like one of those German student duelists.

But, nowadays, even those who use homestead trailers seem almost happy at times.

Diplomatic Busybodies.

W H O'LL be the next member of our diplomatic corps to open his mouth and put his foot in it clear up to his hip-joint?

It has been nearly two months now since our ambassador to Germany had a bad dream and before nurse could quiet him was proclaiming that a certain billionaire was willing to put up one of his loose billions to buy a dictatorship for the country. He failed to furnish the name and address. Maybe they got left out of the nightmare.

Hardly had paregoric wooed this distinguished sufferer back to hush-a-bye-land when our new representative in the Philippines began demanding that, when it came to drinking officials' toasts, his name must come higher up on the wine list or he wouldn't be responsible for the consequences. However, the excitement subsided before he could summon the Pacific fleet to bombard Manila. There's a rumor that Washington sent him word he needn't worry about being appropriately saluted—there'd be a nationwide Bronx cheer awaiting him on his return home.

Since then there's been a lull and the American public is impatient. We do so love a free show and especially when it's amateur night.

Hard-Bitten Females.

T O U R I N G about over certain Western states where open gambling either is by law permitted, or by custom winked at, I noticed this: Generally speaking, the feminine patrons are the steadiest drinkers, the most reckless gamblers of all. And frequently their manners are the rudest and their faces the grimmest—determined seemingly to disavow the theory that their sex is the gentler sex.

On the other hand, the men patrons—descended, many of them, from old gun fighters, old prospectors, old path-finders—grow increasingly docile and subdued, absorbing less than their share of the hard liquor—maybe because they fear there won't be enough left for mama and the girls—and risking their dresses where the gallant ladies plunge with dollars.

Sometimes a fellow, watching the modern procession from the protection of the sidelines, gets to longing for the bygone days when, as Kipling might have put it, and in fact, almost did, woman was only a woman, but a good cigar was ten cents.

These Candid Cameras.

O N C E a citizen had a right to object to the publication of a flashlight view showing him beating his wife or exhibiting his appendicitis scar or taking out his upper or something.

That was before they began printing magazines for those who've abandoned the old-fashioned habit of reading and writing. And it's doing glamorous movie queens no good when these betraying close-ups prove that maybe the glamor is only paint-deep.

Thus the last strongholds of our one-time personal liberty crumble. I used to think a passport picture was about the frankest thing we had in the line of intimate likenesses, excepting, of course, the x-ray. But this candid camera business which catches you unawares—and often without your underwears—er—is the most fishiest attack of all against our practically vanished privacy.

A Few Little Smiles

THE TEXT

A little girl arrived home from her first attendance at Sunday school. Her mother asked her what was the subject the minister spoke about, and she replied, "Six pieces of suet."

"Oh, no, my dear," said the mother, "you've made a mistake."

"Well, mother, that's what he said."

Meeting the minister later in the week the mother asked him if he remembered the title of the text he gave the children the previous Sunday.

"Yes," he said. "Seek peace and ensue it."

NEEDS THE PROOF

Teacher—Do you know that George Washington never told a lie?

Bright Pupil—No, ma'am; I only hear it.

Grammar

"Are your father and mother in?" asked the visitor of the small boy who opened the door.

"They was in," said the child, "but they is out."

"Where's your grammar?"

"She's gone upstairs," said the boy, "for a lay-down."—Hartford Courant.

Engagement Rings

"You promised that you would let me give you an engagement ring," "Jewelry doesn't signify much," answered Miss Cayenne. "When I decide that I wish to be engaged, I'll give you the ring, as feminine independence now has the right to do. And if I give you a ring on the telephone, it'll really mean something."

Barber Shop?

Madge—Don't you sailors have a special ship where you get your hair cut? A sort of floating barber shop?

Sailor—No, there ain't no such ships in our fleet.

Madge—Then what are these clipper ships I've heard so much about?

Stock-Taster

"Your husband isn't working any more?"

"Naw, they fired him from the distillery where he was."

"What for?"

"Staying late to take stock."

In Aberdeen

Father—I want you to quit keeping company with Sandy. For two cents I'd ask him to go.

Daughter—That's nothing. For two cents he'd leave of his own accord.

Some Stew

Big Game Hunter (in Africa)—God heavens! Cannibals!

Wife (trying to be brave)—Now, now, dear, don't get in a stew.

JUST THAT

"What is a bigamist, pa?"

"An overdose of matrimony, my son."

Illustration Handy

Teacher—Do you know, Tommy, a fool can ask more questions than a wise man can answer?

Tommy—That explains why I failed in my examinations, sir!—Stray Stories Magazine.

Directions

The Boss (smiling)—On the way to Smith & Sons you will pass a baseball field and—

Office Boy (hopefully)—Yes, sir?

The Boss (still smiling)—Well, pass it.—Boy's Life

Medical Advance

Blivis—I understand you went and had seventeen teeth out. Did that cure your trouble?

Wunkus—Not exactly; but it cured me of the idea that pulling out a lot of good teeth will cure anything.

Taking Possession

"Hey!" said Satan to the new arrival, "you act as if you owned this place."

"I do. My wife just gave it to me."—U. S. S. Pennsylvania Key-stone.

Household Questions

To Keep Icing on Cake—Sift a little flour over the top of the cake before icing it and the icing will not run off.

For Scratched Furniture—Furniture scratches may be hidden by painting with iodine and then rubbing with furniture polish.

Washing Flannels—Next time you are washing flannels or woollens put about a teaspoonful of olive oil in the water. It will keep them beautifully soft.

Sealing Fish—Dipping fish in boiling water will aid in sealing them.

Double Duty for Soap—When I buy toilet soap I put it away among the sheets and pillow cases, to which it gives an attractive fresh fragrance and, of course, the soap is all the better for keeping.

A Warm Meal—Instead of putting food into the oven to keep hot for late-comers, cover it closely with a tin or basin, and set it over a saucepan of hot water. It will keep hot without drying.

Brighter Pudding—Two teaspoonsful of marmalade stirred into a ground rice pudding just before it is cooked will give it the delightful flavour of fresh orange, without the bother of grating peel. The kiddies will love it.

Cleaning Silverware—When your silverware becomes tarnished, place it in an aluminum saucepan and cover with hot water in which potatoes have been boiled. Leave for an hour, then rinse and it will look like new, without the usual cleaning.

Pineapple Sherbet—Two and one-half cups crushed pineapple, one and one-third cups sweetened condensed milk, one cup water, four tablespoons lemon juice, orange juice. Combine the lemon juice, water and crushed pineapple. Blend with the condensed milk and place in freezer. Let stand to ripen packed in the ice and salt for an hour after it is frozen and the dasher removed. Makes a quart and a half. Orange flavor always brings out pineapple, and half a cup of orange juice and only half a cup of water will prove delicious.

Arch-Foe of Deception

Not long ago a foreign army officer, who had a fancy pair of socks tattooed on his feet and ankles, was shot in the right foot during a skirmish with African natives. When he arrived home some months later, his tattooist wanted to cover the white scar with more "sock." But the colonel would not hear of it. He insisted upon having this apparent "tear in his hose" mended with a tattooed patch.—Collier's Weekly.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness, under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation, and are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Doctor Gives Baby Breath of Life

His own mouth pressed against the tiny lips of a new-born baby, Dr. A. L. Gilbert of Elwood, Ill., breathed the breath of life into the tiny lungs. While the doctor kept the baby alive, an inhalator was rushed to Elwood from a nearby city. The little life was saved.

WORLD'S RECORD CATCH

Bigger than the young angler who caught it is the 60-pound white sea bass recently landed by Douglas Bombard, age eleven, off Santa Catalina island, Calif. Judge Often Handed Down Humor "From the Bench"

Late Lord Darling Lived Drab Scenes With Pleasantries.

Many are the stories told about Lord Darling—better known as Mr. Justice Darling, "England's wittiest judge"—who died recently. He was a poet, with several published volumes to his credit. But it was his humor "from the bench" that made his name almost a household word.

On one occasion, a taleman claimed exemption from jury duty on the ground that he was completely deaf in the left ear. "You can go," said Judge Darling, gravely. "I cannot have anyone in the jury box who cannot hear both sides."

In another case before Justice Darling—in which a Cockney caterer was suing to recover the cost of a picnic luncheon he had provided for a large number of people—the plaintiff waxed highly indignant, under cross-examination, when it was suggested that his sandwiches were mostly "bread and butter." "I am amazed," he said. "I am surprised; I am—," he sputtered. "That will do!" interrupted Darling. "I suggest that had you been more generous with your ham on another occasion and a little less liberal with them here, you might not have found yourself in this situation!"—Kansas City Star.

Identifying Houses

Before houses were numbered, London's business streets were lined on both sides by a succession of gay signboards exhibiting an almost infinite variety of blue boys, black swans, red lions, flying pigs and the like. Even with these signs it was often hard to find one's destination, for the signs were often so badly painted that it would have puzzled a naturalist to make out the animal meant.

More for your Money

Higher Quality Raw Materials!
More Efficient Manufacturing!
Lower Distribution Cost!

These All Combine to Give You Extra Values at No Extra Cost

FROM the day of its introduction, the Firestone Standard Tire has more than lived up to its name by setting a new high standard of tire values. Hundreds of thousands of car owners have already bought it because they saw in it more value for their money.

"How does Firestone do it? How can they build so many extra value features into Firestone Standard Tires and yet sell them at such low prices?" The answer is simple—Firestone controls better-quality rubber and cotton supplies at their source, keeps manufacturing costs low by efficient factory methods and sells in such huge volume that distribution costs are held to a minimum. That is why Firestone has been able to give you such extra value features as Gum-Dipping and two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread.

Make no mistake about this! The Firestone Standard Tire gives you the blowout protection of Firestone's patented Gum-Dipping process. Its scientifically designed tread gives greater non-skid protection and longer wear. And those two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread guard against punctures.

Before you buy ANY tire at ANY price, see today's top tire value—the Firestone Standard Tire. Don't risk your life with thin, worn tires on your Fourth of July trip. FARAWAY MOSES

Your Home

CONSTRUCTION-EQUIPMENT REMODELING

Put a Helmet On Your House

To the familiar assurance that lightning never strikes twice in the same place, the obvious reply is that it doesn't need to. One good hit on your house or barn, for instance, is likely to be enough. It is the part of wisdom, then, to avert the one bull's eye, or to make sure that it will be harmless if it isn't averted.

Experience has shown that steel-roofed buildings are seldom destroyed by lightning, even if the roofs are not grounded. If lightning hits them, it goes off dejected and limping. But grounding is a simple matter and furnishes practically perfect protection. And of course, steel roofing protects, as does no other roofing of comparable cost, against flying sparks and embers.

Don't make the mistake of thinking that steel roofing comes only in the familiar corrugated form, so commonly used for barns, other out-buildings and commercial structures. It is also made in forms suitable for residences. One of its chief advantages for house roofing is the ease and economy with which it can be painted to harmonize with the general color scheme of the building and its surroundings.

But long life at low cost are advantages of stronger appeal, no doubt. There is no roofing of comparable cost that, under average atmospheric conditions, will last so long with a little attention. Of course, copper bearing steel is best since it resists rust from two to two and half times as long as ordinary steel. And you should be sure that your steel roofing has a rugged coating of zinc. Such steel roofing, even without paint, has kept bright and free from rust for from 25 to 30 years. If regularly painted, it should last indefinitely.

Maybe It Needs Woolies

In many an old house there is a cold room—cold even though it has its radiator or register. Probably it is on the north side of the house, although if it has more than one or two outside walls it may be anywhere. And probably this room's chilliness is blamed on an inadequate supply of heat. Other radiators or registers may be doing their job satisfactorily, but the one in this room is bitterly criticized for its weakness.

But perhaps the radiator or register is not at fault. Perhaps it is being asked to supply far more heat than it should because so much of what it does deliver goes to heat the out-of-doors. Or perhaps the register or radiator is a bit weak but still might keep the room warm if it had some help. In a word, if that cold room were insulated it might become a warm room without any change in its heat supply.

At any event, it is worth while to investigate this possibility before giving the room up as hopeless, or going to the cost of altering the heating system. Perhaps it is possible to get rockwool insulation into the outside walls and above the ceiling, if the room is on the second floor, as it generally is. Or maybe rigid insulation boards on the inside of the walls and ceiling would blanket the room sufficiently. A competent building contractor should be able to determine this question.

Pipes That Persist

Comic artists, who like so well to have fun with the common trials of the houseowner, have long found one of their favorite situations in the leaking pipe, whether it be a garden hose or a part of the house piping. But however humorous a leaking pipe may seem in a cartoon, there is nothing funny about it in actuality. The house owner who detects water trickling from a pipe or boiler, or who is aware of those forerunners of leaks, rusty water and diminished flow, sees nothing but trouble and expense in the situation.

He can prevent this for the future, or escape it altogether if he is building a new house, by putting in brass pipe or copper tubing, and a copper alloy storage tank or boiler. For copper and brass are non-ferrous metals and cannot rust. Piping and boilers of these metals will assure the house owner a supply of pure, clear water at adequate pressure—just such a supply as he is entitled to get for the money that, as a taxpayer, he spends on reservoirs, pumping plants, filtration plants and aqueducts to help provide the community with unpolluted water in plentiful quantity.

Considering the paramount importance of the water supply to comfort and health, the home owner, prospective or actual, should give careful consideration to brass pipe or copper tubing for both cold and hot water lines in his house. They are not expensive but can be installed at only a little more cost than that of the best grade of ferrous pipe. This is also true of copper alloy storage tanks or boilers— which, by the way, are not only rust-proof but are also as strong as steel. A house in which no trouble with the water supply need be feared is something that every home owner should plan to have.

The Personal Tub Drive

The goal of the modern home seems to be a bathroom for each member of the family. It is a goal that, attained, should put an end to a source of much domestic controversy, however it may cause half a dozen bathtub rings to invite the housewife's scrubbing where but one did so before.

This urge for more and better bathrooms is shared by owners of old houses. They are modernizing their old bathrooms and putting in new ones where that is possible. And to make it frequently possible the manufacturers of bathroom fixtures are making them in sizes and shapes to enable the house owner to take advantage of waste or unnecessary space. For instance, the ends of many hallways are being converted into bathrooms. Bedrooms larger than necessary are having bathrooms built into the surplus space. Room under stairways is being equipped with at least toilets and lavatories. It is possible now to install the three essential fixtures of a bathroom in a space 5 feet by 6 feet.

The bathroom has shared with the kitchen a remarkable transformation in the last decade. Designers have striven to produce bathrooms that are pleasing in form as well as attractive in color, easy to keep clean, and durable, whether metal-plated or enameled. The bathroom has become a place of colorful, shining beauty, without cracks or corners to catch dirt, and flooded with light. Nor need the finest effects be prohibitive in cost, for there are wide varieties of floor and wall coverings
